HOW TO PLANT EVERGREENS

The hole for planting an evergreen should be at least one foot larger than the ball of earth and deep enough to allow placing the tree slightly deeper than it stood in the nursery. Place the tree in the hole, loosen and pull back the burlap covering and fill the hole three-quarters full of good soil. Firm it well. Fill once or twice with water and allow it to soak into the ground before putting on more soil. A slight basin or depression should be left to facilitate later waterings. Water evergreens freely throughout the summer. A mulch of straw or peat will prove highly beneficial.

HOW TO PLANT YOUR ROSES

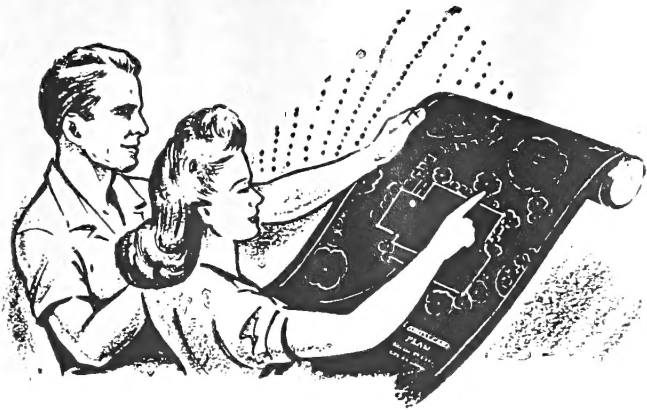

To obtain success in planting roses it is important that they are properly planted. The roots should be trimmed back some and the hole dug large enough so that the roots will not be crowded. Place the plant in the hole so that the bud union above the roots is at least two inches below the level of the ground, then fill in around the roots with dirt and water in well. After the water has seeped away, cut each cane back to about four inches above the level of the ground and cover the plant over completely with a mound of earth. After about six inches of new growth has forced through the mound of earth you can hoe the mound away gradually.
